

THE SAGA OF THE AGENOR

Early in her third patrol the Bibb reverted to more familiar Coast Guard activity when she assisted in the rescue of 17 crew members from a Cypriot Liberty ship. The SS Agenor was enroute to the scrap yards and her crew had been struggling with high seas and ancient iron for six days and six nights before their ship wheezed her last. We took her crew and boarded them for two days while our engineers helped them assay the damage. The damage was judged irreparable, the Agenor was to be towed to her final destination.

Out here they'd fix her with white paint.
