

At Rodman, we hopped a ride to the gate where we all scattered toward the many taxi cabs and their very helpful drivers.

"The La Gloria, what's that?"

Bill Dixon and Willy Garrison checked out the local merchandise.

Of all the old ruins in Panama, the cathedral that Scott Dean is looking at is the best preserved.

The original church was built shortly following the founding of the city in 1519. Since then, it has undergone several repairs and restorations, the last of which was made in 1619 by Bishop Hernando Ramirez Sanchez.

Having remained untouched since then, it remains as an historical landmark of a bygone era.
