

When operational difficulties were first noted on our starboard shaft, Capt. Ayers decided it would be necessary to send down a team of qualified SCUBA divers to determine the extent of the damage. This meant that these men would be diving in water well below the normal freezing temperature. This team of divers consisted of: Charlie Niederman, Engineering Officer; Gene Johnson; Howard Wolfe and Arnold Veglahn.

