

IN HONG KONG

Hong Kong Harbor

And then there was sight-seeing. You are living in the center of Fragrant Harbor, a mecca of commerce plied by time honored junks, modern steamers, crowded ferrys. A breath-taking tram ride to the top of Victoria Peak affords you a panoramic view of Hong Kong, Kowloon, and beyond into the New Territories. You take a "double-decker" to the junk village at Aberdeen, and have supper at a floating restaurant. Or you cross to Kowloon and take a train to Shatin, or farther to the Red China Border. Or you spend an afternoon with your friends at the Tiger Balm Gardens, or take pictures at the Botanical Gardens, or tour a furniture factory, a carpet factory . . . Three and one-half weeks later, can you say farewell to Hong Kong?
