The job of the sonarman is much like that of the radarman. We stand underway CIC watches where we use all the equipment found in CIC including surface and air search radars, radios, and various aids to navigation.

In case of a submarine sighting or attack, we are always ready to swing into action. Super-sonarmen W. K. Heckman and Bob Peeples can always be called upon to use their skills in ASW techniques as a deadly weapon against the enemy below. Our sonarmen are trained at the US Navy Fleet Sonar School, Key West, Florida. They are trained to operate and repair the modern ASW equipment used by the allied forces. They are also trained in the operation and repair of the equipment found on the TANEY.
