

On September 25, 1967, the United States Coast Guard Cutter Westwind and her crew said farewell to families and loved ones. As the Westwind blew its last three farewell blasts from its steam whistle and the arms of the Pennington Street drawbridge stood at attention, the men stood silent thinking about what lay ahead of them. For some it would be a long and lonesome journey, for others, excitement and adventure.

No matter what, all would perform as one!

A last kiss

Before
sailing

